

New Evangelization in Redemptoris Missio 33:
Renewing the Church's Mission in a Changing World
Fr. Michael Q. Nguyen SVD

In Redemptoris Missio 33, Pope John Paul II identifies three distinct missionary situations, missio ad gentes, ordinary pastoral care, and the New Evangelization. The New Evangelization responds specifically to baptized Christians whose faith has weakened or become disconnected from daily life. It is not a new Gospel but a renewed proclamation of the Gospel, calling the Church to missionary conversion in a secularized and rapidly changing world.

Redemptoris Missio* (RM) 33, Mission Ad Gentes Retains Its Value

33. The fact that there is a diversity of activities in the Church's one mission is not intrinsic to that mission, but arises from the variety of circumstances in which that mission is carried out.⁵¹ Looking at today's world from the viewpoint of evangelization, we can distinguish three situations.

First, there is the situation which the Church's missionary activity addresses: peoples, groups, and socio-cultural contexts in which Christ and his Gospel are not known, or which lack Christian communities sufficiently mature to be able to incarnate the faith in their own environment and proclaim it to other groups. This is mission ad gentes in the proper sense of the term.

Secondly, there are Christian communities with adequate and solid ecclesial structures. They are fervent in their faith and in Christian living. They bear witness to the Gospel in their surroundings and have a sense of commitment to the universal mission. In these communities the Church carries out her activity and pastoral care.

Thirdly, there is an intermediate situation, particularly in countries with ancient Christian roots, and occasionally in the younger Churches as well, where entire groups of the baptized have lost a living sense of the faith, or even no longer consider themselves members of the Church, and live a life far removed from Christ and his Gospel. In this case what is needed is a "new evangelization" or a "re-evangelization."

I. Introduction: The Missionary Challenge of the Contemporary World

The Church's missionary mandate remains permanent (RM 1).

Contemporary societies face secularization, relativism, religious indifference, and cultural pluralism.

RM 33 distinguishes three missionary situations, providing a pastoral framework for the Church's evangelizing mission.

Research Question: Why is the New Evangelization necessary, and what distinguishes it from the Church's traditional missionary activity?

II. The Three Missionary Situations in Redemptoris Missio 33

A. Mission Ad Gentes

Evangelization of peoples who have never heard the Gospel.

Primary missionary responsibility of the Church.

Focus on first proclamation (kerygma).

B. Ordinary Pastoral Care

Serving established Christian communities.
Nourishing believers through Scripture, sacraments, catechesis, and pastoral ministry.
Strengthening mature discipleship.

C. The New Evangelization

Directed toward baptized Christians who have lost a living faith.
Addressing communities marked by secularization and religious indifference.
Reawakening faith through renewed proclamation of Christ.

III. Essential Characteristics of the New Evangelization

A. A Renewed Encounter with Jesus Christ

Christ remains the center of evangelization.
Evangelization begins with personal conversion before pastoral activity.

B. New Ardor, New Methods, and New Expression

Renewed missionary zeal.
Creative pastoral approaches.
Effective communication of the unchanging Gospel within contemporary culture.

C. Witness as the Foundation of Evangelization

Holiness and credible Christian living.
Evangelization through authentic discipleship.
The Holy Spirit as the principal agent of mission.

IV. Pastoral Implications for the Church Today

A. From Maintenance to Mission

Moving beyond preserving Church structures.
Becoming a missionary Church reaching inactive and marginalized Catholics.

B. Evangelizing Contemporary Culture

Dialogue with secular society.
Digital evangelization and social media.
Inculturation of the Gospel.

C. Every Baptized Person as a Missionary Disciple

Shared missionary responsibility of clergy, religious, and laity.
Families, young people, and small Christian communities as agents of New Evangelization.

V. Conclusion

RM 33 offers a theological framework for understanding the Church's three missionary responsibilities.

The new Evangelization is not a new gospel but a renewed way of proclaiming Christ ~~but~~ with new zeal, methods, and expression. It calls every baptized person to live as a missionary disciple, witness through a holy life, and bring the gospel to today's world, especially in ~~for~~ societies affected by secularization and religious indifference. The church's mission is to renew faith, strengthen believers, and lead people to a deeper relationship with Jesus.

The New Evangelization is directed not toward non-Christians but toward the baptized who need a renewed encounter with Christ.

The future of the Church depends not merely on maintaining institutions but on forming missionary disciples who proclaim the Gospel with renewed conviction and hope.

Central Argument

The New Evangelization, as articulated in Redemptoris Missio 33, is the Church's missionary response to the crisis of faith among the baptized. By distinguishing it from missio ad gentes and ordinary pastoral care, John Paul II presents a vision of evangelization that calls the entire Church to renewed conversion, missionary discipleship, and creative witness in the contemporary world.
